AUCTION TERMS

This is an internet and mail bid sale with an automated electronic close, conducted by Classical Numismatic Group, Inc. (CNG). Bidding in the auction constitutes acceptance of the following terms:

1. The property listed in this catalogue is offered for sale by CNG for itself and as agent for various owners and other consignors. We reserve the right to reject any bid, to determine the opening price, to set bidding increments, to vary the order of the auction, to reopen bidding in the case of a dispute, to withdraw any lot, to bid on behalf of CNG, to bid on behalf of the consignor, and to permit the consignor to bid on his own lots. CNG may loan or advance money to consignors or prospective bidders, and may have an interest other than commission charges in any lot. CNG may bid on its own account as an "insider" with information not available to the public.
2. Lots will be sold in the order listed in the catalogue. The first lot will close electronically at www.cngcoins.com at 9AM Eastern Time on the sale date, with subsequent lots closing every 20 seconds thereafter. All written, fax, email and phone bids must be received by 5PM Eastern Time, on the day prior to the sale date. Electronic bids may be placed by approved bidders up until the closing time of each lot. The electronic clock on the website represents the official closing time for each lot. Bidders intending to bid electronically must first register at cngcoins.com. New website registrations are processed for approval Monday through Friday 9AM-5PM Eastern Time only. No new registrations will be approved on the sale date.
3. An 18% Buyer's Fee will be added to the hammer price of all successful written, fax, email and phone bids. A 15% Buyer's Fee will be added to the hammer price of all successful electronic bids directly placed on www.cngcoins.com.
4. All coins are guaranteed genuine. Attribution, date, condition and other descriptions are the opinion of the cataloguer, and no warranty is expressed or implied. Please note that an auction sale is not an approval sale. Lots examined prior to the sale and lots purchased by floor bidders (including bidders executing commission bids on behalf of other parties) may not be returned for any reason except lack of authenticity. All claims of misdescription and all claims of return, except claims regarding authenticity, must be made within 5 days of receipt of material. Any claim of lack of authenticity must be made in writing by the original purchaser immediately after discovery that an item is not authentic, and upon making such a claim the original purchaser must immediately return the lot to CNG in the same condition as at the time of the auction. Coins that have been encapsulated ("slabbed") by a grading and/or authentication service may not be returned for any reason, including authenticity, if they have been removed from the encapsulation ("slab"). If payment is made by credit card, rights of return are governed by these Auction Terms which supersede any rights of return promulgated by the card issuer. Estimates are intended as a guide only and not as a statement of opinion of value.
5. Invoices are due and payable immediately upon receipt. Interest and late fees of 2.0% per month, or at the highest rate permitted by law, whichever is less, from the date of the auction, shall be payable on invoices not settled within 30 days of the auction date. Payment may be made by check or bank wire. Credit cards (Visa or MasterCard) will be accepted; credit card payments will not be accepted more than 14 days after the sale date. Payment by check must be made in either US dollars ($) drawn on a US bank or British sterling (£) drawn on a British bank. All successful bidders outside North America and the United Kingdom will be charged an additional $20 fee for bank charges that are the result of international wire transfer fees; this fee will be deducted for credit card or check payment as described above. CNG may reduce or compromise any charge or fee at its discretion.
6. Bidders not known to us must provide satisfactory credit references or pay a deposit as determined at CNG's discretion before bidding. Minors are not permitted to bid without written consent of a parent guaranteeing payment. CNG may require payment in full from any bidder prior to delivery of lots. Title does not pass until lots are paid in full. Upon receipt of lots, the buyer assumes full responsibility for loss or damage. Delivery to the buyer's address of record shall constitute receipt by the buyer regardless of the identity of the person accepting delivery.
7. Estimates are in U.S. dollars ($) and bids must be made in even dollar ($ amounts. The CNG website, www.cngcoins.com, will execute electronic bids on behalf of all electronic bidders. Subject to reserves and opening prices, all electronic bids will be executed by the electronic software at one bidding increment (approximately 10%) over the next highest bid. All written, fax, email and phone bids received before 5PM the day prior to the sale date will be uploaded to the CNG website no later than the day prior to the sale date. These bids will not be subject to the minimum required bid cited on the website at the time of the upload. Any written, fax, email and phone bids received after the deadline or with special instructions will be executed at CNG's complete discretion and will be subject to the next bid required by the website. In the case of identical written, fax, email and phone bids, the earliest bid received wins. An electronic bid has priority over any identical written, fax, email or phone bid. Bid by lot number. No lot will be broken. Bidders are responsible for errors in bidding. Check your bids carefully. Electronic bidders may check their bids under User Services at www.cngcoins.com.
8. A word on Reserves. CNG may place a reserve on any lot. However, no reserve will be higher than the estimate, and ordinarily lots are reserved at 60% of estimate.
9. Bidders personally guarantee payment for their successful bids, including bidders executing commission bids from other parties and bidders representing corporations or other entities. Buyers accepting commission bids from other parties do so at their own risk and remain responsible for payment under these Auction Terms.
10. In the event a successful bidder fails to make full payment within 30 days of the auction date, CNG reserves the right to deem the sale incomplete and to resell the material, and the bidder agrees to pay for the reasonable cost of such a sale and also to pay any difference between the resale price and the previously successful bid. CNG reserves all rights that it is entitled to under the Pennsylvania Uniform Commercial Code, including the right to offset any sums due from a successful bidder against any future consignment or purchase or monies or goods in possession of CNG.
11. Sales tax, postage, handling and insurance are the responsibility of the buyer and are added to all invoices where appropriate. For buyers in the European Union, CNG may import lots into the United Kingdom prior to shipment and charge buyers the import Value Added Tax. On any tax not paid by the purchaser which should have been paid, even if not invoiced by CNG, the purchaser agrees to pay the same on demand together with any interest or penalty that may be assessed. It is the responsibility of the buyer to comply with foreign customs and other regulations.
12. Prices realized are published and are mailed with CNG's next publication. Prices realized are posted at www.cngcoins.com and successful electronic bidders are notified by email after the last lot of the sale closes.
13. Bidders hereby waive any claim for incidental, consequential or exemplary damages arising from this auction. The sole remedy that any participant in the auction shall have for any claim or controversy arising out of the auction shall be a refund, without interest, of all or part of the purchase price paid by the participant.
14. All rights granted by CNG or otherwise available to bidders and purchasers, under these Auction Terms or otherwise, are personal and may not be assigned or transferred to any other person or entity, whether by operation of law or otherwise. No third party may rely on any benefit or right conferred by these Auction Terms. Bidders acting as agents must disclose the agency in writing to CNG prior to the auction; otherwise rights are limited to the agent and are not transferable to the undisclosed principal.
15. Any dispute regarding this auction shall be governed by the laws of Pennsylvania and shall be adjudicated only by the Lancaster County Court of Common Pleas or the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania; all bidders submit themselves to the personal jurisdiction of these courts for this purpose, consent to service of process by registered or certified mail, and waive any contrary provisions of Articles 14 or 15 of the French Civil Code and any similar provisions in any jurisdiction. In any dispute regarding this auction, the prevailing party shall be entitled to recover its reasonable costs and attorney fees.

All written, fax, email and phone bids must be received by 5PM (EDT) May 22, 2012.

The Electronic Close starts at 8AM EDT on May 23, 2013. Lots close every 20 seconds.

To participate in this sale electronically you must be registered and approved to bid on www.cngcoins.com.

Ruling as its prince from 861 until 880 when he retired in favor of his son, Guaimar, Guaifer (or Guaifar) was connected by marriage with the rulers of Beneventum, particularly Sicard and his sons, Radelchis I and Siconulf (who became the first Prince of Salerno). Guaifer gained the Salernitan throne in 861, when he headed a popular uprising against its legitimate ruler, Adhemar. Guaifer subsequently imprisoned Adhelmar, having him blinded as well. Almost immediately after Guaifer became prince, Capua declared itself independent of Salernitan control. Capua's prince, Pando the Rapacious, however, died shortly thereafter, throwing the principality into a lengthy succession (and independence) crisis which would eventually divide Beneventum and Salerno and involve the intervention of the Holy Roman Emperor.

Guaifer married Landaleica, the daughter of Lando I, the count of Capua, by whom he had a son, Guaimar. Beginning in 877, Guaimar shared the Salernitan throne with his father. That same year, Guaimar assisted the Holy Roman Emperor, Charles the Bald, against Muslim incursions into Italy. In 881, when his father, Guaifer, retired to the monastery at Monte Cassino and he was ruling on his own, Guaimar was himself threatened by the Muslims, as well as by Athanasius, the Duke of Naples, who now controlled Capua. To assist him in defending against the Muslims, Guaimar traveled to Constantinople, where he did homage to the emperor in return for mercenaries. In 893, Guaimar appointed his son, also named Guaimar, as co-ruler. The final years of the elder Guaimar's reign (before his own retirement) were involved in assisting Beneventum against the Byzantines and putting down pro-Neapolitan revolts in his own territory.

Al-Hajjaj b. Yusuf (b. Al-Hakam b. 'Akil al-Thakafi, Abu Muhammad) was the most famous and able governor of the Ummayyads. He was born to a poor family in Ta'if in 661. He first came to the notice of 'Abd al-Malik by restoring discipline among mutinous troops. He did this with a severity for which he later became renowned. He was equally brave in action and became a trusted commander of the caliph. In the process he was instrumental in recapturing Mecca from the anti-caliph, Ibn al-Zubayr and thereby re-uniting the Islamic state. He was appointed governor of Iraq and, in addition to this, four years later, governor of Khorassan and Sijistan. By 702, from his fortified base at Wasit which he had founded, he was master of the entire Islamic East. From there he organised the conquests of Transoxiana, Uman and India. On the civil side it was he who organised the division of the qur'an into thirty ajza, and he who was instrumental in striking the first purely arabic coinage. He was also an important agricultural reformer, ensuring greater productivity in his lands. His administrative powers were equally great when organising his territory peacefully as they had been when he was conquering it. He died aged fifty-two in June 714. He had left such a powerful legacy however that verses about him and anecdotes, not always in his favor, continued to be circulated until the present day.

1999. ISLAMIC, Umayyad Caliphate. Uncertain period (post-reform). AH 77-132 / AD 697-750. \textae Fals (22mm, 3.79 g, 5h). Sarmin(?) mint. VF, dark green patina, some encrustation. ($400)

While the beginning of the mint formula can be easily read ("bismillah zuriba haza al-fals bi"), the name of the mint is not complete, owing to the poor preservation of the coin. The beginning of the mint name, however, can be read as "sr" and, given the similarity of this type to others from neighboring mints, it is likely that the mint on this coin is Sarmin.

EARLY DATED EUROPEAN COINAGE

Classical Numismatic Group is pleased to present a substantial offering of early dated medieval coins of Europe, drawn primarily from the Michael Shutterly and Rye Collections. The early dated coins of Europe form one of the first links between medieval and modern coinage. Anno Domini dating of coins using Latin script did not begin until the mid-13th century, and did not become prevalent in Europe until three centuries later. The following selection of coins is organized chronologically by date, then alphabetic by country and issuing authority. All coin descriptions cite the recently-published comprehensive catalog of this coinage by Robert A. Levinson:

The Early Dated Coins of Europe 1234-1500 An illustrated catalogue and guide to dated medieval coinage

The Early Dated Coins of Europe, 1234-1500, by Robert A. Levinson, presents for the first time a comprehensive listing in chronological order, by region, state, and mint, of all the known types of gold, silver, and copper dated coins struck in medieval Europe with an Anno Domini date of 1500 or earlier. This book, produced by the author over the course of 15 years, expands on the only volume remotely comparable, the long out of print 1915 work by Albert Frey, The Dated European Coinage Prior to 1501. The glossaries and appendices of this new book will be invaluable not only to collectors of 'early dated coins,' but also to anyone needing a quick reference to medieval coin-issuing cities, states, and mints, identifying their basic designs, or reading their sometimes complicated legends. Every numismatist will find the annotated bibliography a vital resource. The Early Dated Coins of Europe, 1234-1500, will be a standard reference for years to come.

Changing hands many times during its medieval history, Besançon fell under the control of the Duke of Burgundy following the division of Charlemagne's empire in 843. Control of the city then passed on to the Holy Roman Empire in 1034, and it later became a prince-bishopric in 1184. Continued struggles with the Duke of Burgundy strained the rule of the Archbishop, with the former ultimately retaking the city during the 15th century. The marriage between Mary of Burgundy and Holy Roman Emperor Maximilian I placed control of Besançon back under the empire and now the Habsburgs. During the reign of Charles V, the city's free imperial status was protected and in recognition of this, her coinage continued to bear his portrait into the mid 17th century, long after his abdication and death.

From the outset of the Franco-Dutch war, the Dutch resistance to the multinational invasion led by France was surprisingly strong, eventually forcing the French king Louis XIV to abandon his goals. Hostilities soon gave way to negotiations among the many nations participating in the conflict. These negotiations took place between August 1678 and December 1679, ultimately culminating in the Treaty of Nijmegen. Johann Georg II, an ally of France, issued this taler to commemorate the treaty.

Johann Friedrich, the Protestant elector of Saxony, was an important figure in the religious wars of the 16th century. Not only was he a personal friend of Martin Luther, but the elector also made sweeping reforms in his lands in support of the Protestant cause. In 1546, Johann Friedrich became embroiled in the Schmalkaldic War against Catholic Holy Roman Emperor Karl V. For the elector, the outcome was not good: he was defeated by Karl V at the Battle of Mühlberg in 1547 and imprisoned. When his cousin Maurice attacked Karl V in 1552, he was released and restored to power as a duke of Saxony. This coin was struck in the year of his release, just two years before his death.

Called the "Nero of Kashmir" because of stories of his cruelty (S.B. Bhattacherje, Encyclopaedia of Indian Events and Dates [Delhi 1995], p. A-20), Harshadeva (1089-1101) was viewed as a brutal and vainglorious monarch, who burdened his subjects with heavy taxation and acted as an idol-destroying fundamentalist by despoiling the local shrines of their wealth. This view of Harshadeva comes from the twelfth century metrical chronicle of the region, the Rajatarangini ("The River of Kings") by Kalhana. According to Kalhana, Harshadeva had the confiscated gold and silver minted into coinage, in contrast to the then-current bronze coinage, which he then distributed among his favorites and possibly to his army (7.950, 1117-8). One type of the gold coinage was based on the elephant tankas of Karnataka (7.927). A second type, known only by a unique specimen published by Cunningham in 1894, shows a horseman.

Harshadeva's silver coinage paralleled his gold issues. To date, the only known silver coin was a unique specimen of the elephant type, published by Cunningham in 1894. In 2011, a small group of silver horseman type coins of Harshadeva appeared. Reportedly found near Gurjanwala in the northeastern Punjab, these coins' design derives from Shahi and Kalachuri prototypes, and is the same design as Cunningham's unique horseman type gold coin. Cribb and Mabin, in their study of the Gujranwala Hoard, cite a total of six obverse and six reverse dies for the eleven coins and note that one example is die-linked to Cunningham's horseman type gold coin.

For a further discussion of this coinage in relation to the Gujranwala Hoard, see Joe Cribb and Mabin Ahmed, "The coins of the Kashmir king Harshadeva (AD 1089-1101) in the light of the 'Gujranwala' hoard," Journal of the Oriental Numismatic Society, No. 208 (Summer 2011), pp. 28-33.

Three Very Rare Genoese Half Ducats

The development of Genoa as a commercial empire began shortly after its establishment as a self-governing commune in the early 11th century. During the First Crusade (1096–1099), the city increased its power and influence by providing transport and support to the crusaders. At the sieges of Antioch in 1098 (where the Genoese fleet blockaded the city), and Jerusalem in 1099, Genoese troops provided assistance. As a result of the city's support, Genoa acquired lucrative and favorable commercial treaties and alliances, as well as part-ownership of the important Levantine port cities of Arsuf, Caesarea, and Acre. Genoa also controlled a large portion of the trade between the Byzantine Empire, Tripoli, the Principality of Antioch, Armenia, and Egypt.

During the thirteenth century, Genoa became the pre-eminent economic power in the Western Mediterranean, and, along with Venice, its chief rival, controlled the Mediterranean slave trade. Because it played a significant role in the Fourth Crusade (1202–1204) and its support of the newly established Latin Empire, Venice gained control of a large portion of the commerce in the eastern Mediterranean. In order to counteract Venice and regain control of the commerce, Genoa allied with the Empire of Nicaea. In return, Genoa would assist the Nicaeans in recapturing Constantinople. In 1261, Nicaean troops took the Byzantine capital. Genoa was now granted free trade rights in the Latin Empire, as well as control of ports and way stations in the Aegean. Chios and Lesbos, as well as Izmir, also came under the control of Genoa.

At the same time, Genoa began to expand its reach into the Black Sea area. Having received the right to trade there, Genoa made it an important area of trade by bringing a number of towns under their control, including Cembalo (mod. Balaklava), Sudaq (mod. Sudak), Vosporo (mod. Kerch), Tana (mod. Azov), Matrega (mod. Taman), Mapa (mod. Anapa), Bata (mod. Novorossijsk), and Ginestra (mod. Odessa). One of these towns was the former city of Theodosia, which the Genoese renamed Caffa and made their regional headquarters.

By the fifteenth century, however, Genoese control in the Crimea declined as that of the Ottomans increased. While Genoa lost most of its commercial bases, some of the cities retained small Italian minority populations well into the twentieth century. The loss of its eastern colonies created a deep economic crisis for Genoa, becoming the catalyst for its eventual decline as a major European power. Consequently, Genoa shifted its interests to Spain and established flourishing communities in Cadiz and Lisbon. It was here that one of Genoa's expatriates, Christoffa Corombo (Christopher Columbus), was able to seek support for his quest of a western route to Asia and its spices.

2278. ITALY, Genova. Tommaso di Campofregoso. Doge, first tenure, 1415–1421. Pale AV Half Ducat (21mm, 1.77 g, 6h). Uncertain mint in the Black Sea region. S/L/A/V/R/E/T/I D/V/X T DVX IANVE, St. Laurentius standing right and Doge kneeling left, holding banner between them / SIT T XPC : DAT : QV T P(E)IS IST(E) DVC, Christ standing facing, raising hand in benediction and holding Gospels, surrounded by mandorla containing nine stars. CNI III –; cf. Ives pl. XI, 1 (Chios); cf. Papadopoli (Castellani) 16095 (Chios) and 16172 (half ducat attributed to Pera); cf. Schlumberger pl. XIV, 13 (Chios) and pl. XVII, 22 (Pera); cf. Gamberini 370 (half ducat attributed to Pera) and 397 (Chios). VF, rough strike. Very rare. ($1000)

Based on the obverse legend, this coin belongs to the period of Tomaso di Campofregoso's first tenure as Doge. The careful production of this coin, with its complete legends, good centering, and somewhat better style overall suggests that it was struck prior to the Milanese takeover in Genoa, a time when the colonial coinage of Genoa gradually became cruder. The later issues of Campofregoso and his successors are quite crude.

This coin weighs exactly half of 3.54 g, the maximum standard weight of a traditional Venetian Ducat. It appears to have been struck at one of the Genoese-controlled areas in the Black Sea area, where the local needs of commerce required such coins to be struck.

2279. ITALY, Genova. Tommaso di Campofregoso. Doge, first tenure, 1415–1421. Pale AV Half Ducat (21mm, 1.67 g, 6h). Uncertain mint in the Black Sea region. S/L/A/V/R/E/T/[I] D/V/X TC DVX IANVE, St. Laurentius standing right and Doge kneeling left, holding banner between them / SIT T XPC DAT Q T [REGIS] IST(E) DVCAT, Christ standing facing, raising hand in benediction and holding Gospels, surrounded by mandorla containing nine stars. CNI III –; cf. Ives pl. XI, 1 (Chios) and pl. XII, 6 (half ducat attributed to Pera); cf. Papadopoli (Castellani) 16172 (half ducat attributed to Pera); cf. Schlumberger pl. XVII, 22 (Pera); cf. Gamberini 370 (half ducat attributed to Pera). VF, rough strike. Very rare. ($1000)

Although full weight Genoese and Milanese colonial ducati or zecchini are frequently encountered, only one or two examples of imitative half ducats have ever been noted. Gamberini, citing a mezzo zecchino, attributed it to the Pera mint and illustrated his description with a line drawing of a standard Pera mint ducat. He also cross-referenced the coin to Schlumberger p. 454 (pl. XVII, 22). Castellani also noted the existence of a half ducat (unillustrated), bearing the same description and attribution as Gamberini. Castellani's description of the coin, however, ends with his mentioning a P mintmark, but following this with a question mark. Either he imagined seeing the P, or supposed that one ought to exist, since, in all other respects, the legends of the half ducat matched those of the Pera mint full ducat.

While attributing this half ducat to the Pera mint (part of a section of Constantinople once under the control of Genoa) is an attractive possibility, Pera mint coins are rather well-made, being nicely engraved and struck well-centered on flans of high purity gold. Similarly, the default attribution to Chios can also be discounted. Although that mint issued crudely produced coins of pale gold, during the reign of Tomaso Campofregoso, such coins appear to have either a pellet trefoil mint mark in the legend, or a large 'S' below the flag pole. Since this half ducat lacks the diagnostics for attributing it to Chios or Pera, this coin may then have been struck at one of the Genoese-controlled areas in the Black Sea area, where the local needs of commerce required such coins to be struck.

2280. ITALY, Genova. Raffaele Adorno. Doge, 1443-1447. Pale AV Half Ducat (21mm, 1.67 g, 12h). Uncertain mint in the Black Sea region. [S/L/A/V/R/C/T/I] D/V/X RÀFÀCL ADV, St. Laurentius standing right and Doge kneeling left, holding banner between them / SIT T XPC DAT O RÈGIS ISTÈ DV, Christ standing facing, raising hand in benediction and holding Gospels, surrounded by mandorla containing nine stars. CNI III –; Ives –; cf. Papadopoli (Castellani) 16103; cf. Schlumberger pl. XIV, 16; cf. Gamberini 401. VF, rough strike. Very rare. ($1000)

Although all of the published Venetian-style ducats of Raffaele Adorno are attributed to Chios, this coin can be attributed securely to the same uncertain Black Sea area mint as the previous two lots. This coin retains the Venetian-style reverse legend, rather than GLORIA I EXCELSIS DEO ET I TERA P, the one that the Milanese adopted after 1421. Moreover, this coin lacks the large S mintmark at the base of the staff, an element that had become a standard part of Chios mint issues at this time. It appears to have been struck at one of the Genoese-controlled areas in the Black Sea area, where the local needs of commerce required such coins to be struck.

Frederick II Hohenstaufen, "Stupor Mundi" - "Wonder of the World" - was the most enlightened ruler of the medieval European world, and single-handedly almost ignited a renaissance a century before it took hold in western Europe. Besides encouraging the study of both the ancient and natural worlds (he wrote an insightful treatise on falconry), Frederick was instrumental in improving relations with the Muslims, negotiating free access to Christian holy sites in Palestine, where all Crusader armies had been unsuccessful. One of his innovations was a gold coinage comparable in style and quality to the gold of the ancient Caesars. The classical motifs proclaimed his inheritance of the legacy of Rome, and the Augustale and its fractions were issued concurrently with the publication of the Constitution of Melfi, his codification of Norman law meant to follow the famous Roman law codes. These coins were struck until Frederick's death in 1250, and may have been continued by his successors for about another fifteen years.

The eldest son of Jaime I of Aragon and his second wife Violante de Hungria, Pietro spent much of his youth and early adulthood fighting his father's wars of the Reconquista against the Moors, where he gain a great deal of military experience for his future enterprises. His marriage on 13 June 1262 to Constanza II de Sicilia, daughter of Manfredo, King of Sicily, provided him with the legitimate excuse to remove the "usurper" Carlo I d'Angiò, who had seized control of the region following Manfredo's death in 1266. In early 1282, a popular rebellion, known as the War of the Sicilian Vespers, broke out in reaction to the rule of Carlo I. Taking advantage of this situation, Pietro launched his invasion to claim the throne for himself. Although he installed himself successfully on the throne and Carlo I was driven into exile in Naples, the remainder of Pietro's short reign in Sicily was beset by warfare. The first involved his conflict with Carlo and was halted short of a trial by duel arranged in France to be judged by Edward I of England. While Pietro was ultimately successful against Carlo, the second conflict, the Aragonese Crusade, beginning in 1284 and continuing until Pietro's death the following year, embroiled France in the region and helped to undermine Aragonese power.

Theriaca (also known as 'Venice treacle') was an ancient medicinal compound, employed as a traditional medicine since the time of Mithradates VI of Pontus, and was used as antidote against any poisonous bite. Nero's physician Andromachus, as well as the medical author Galen, discussed its medicinal value. Containing more than 64 ingredients, including viper flesh and opium, as well as herbs, cinnamon, agarics, and gum arabic, it was mixed with honey and wine to complete the compounding process. During the Middle Ages it was considered a panacea. Theriac became a valuable article of commerce, with Venice, Padua, Milan, Genoa, Bologna, Constantinople, and Cairo all competing in its trade. It was expensive and hence available only for the rich (quality theriac cost one German taler in 1580s). By the time of the Renaissance, the making of theriac had become an official public ceremony, especially in Italian cities. It is first mentioned in England in 1538, and it gained popularity in Germany around the same time. Pharmacists sold it as late as 1900.

Venice regulated the production and trade of theriac beginning in 1258, and by the fifteenth century controlled its distribution throughout Europe. About 40 pharmacy shops in Venice were officially allowed to produce and sell theriac.

Beginning in July 1584, events had gone badly for the Dutch Republic. Willem van Oranje was assassinated and succeeded as stadhouder by his sixteen-year-old son, Maurits van Nassau. At about the same time, the important commercial city of Antwerp was besieged by the Spanish (July 1584-August 1585). Since Maurits was still in his minority, and the war had turned against them, the Estates General sought the direct sovereign protection of France and England, an offer that both monarchies refused. When Spain and France signed the secret Treaty of Joinville on 31 December 1584, a treaty that appeared to unite Catholic France and Spain against the Protestant forces, especially England, Elizabeth I began to take direct action in the Dutch revolt. On 10 August 1585 at Nonsuch Palace, a treaty was signed between England and the Estates General. Under its terms, Elizabeth would supply 5,000 foot soldiers and 1,000 cavalry, ostensibly to assist in lifting the siege of Antwerp (which surrendered to the Spanish a week later), as well as an annual subsidy in return for the English receipt of the Dutch cities, Brielle, and Vlissingen as garrisons. The Dutch used this treaty to attempt to make Elizabeth their sovereign protector by offering her the title of Governor General (Gouverneur-generaal), but she refused.

To lead the English forces, Elizabeth appointed Robert Dudley, 1st Earl of Leicester. Leicester seemed the obvious choice. As Elizabeth's favorite courtier and confidante, he would be her representative and could keep her apprised of the situation. He also supported the Dutch cause, arguing since 1577 for direct English assistance to them. Willem van Oranje held him in high esteem, and he was popular among the Dutch people. Although the terms of his position and authority had only been vaguely defined in the treaty, and Elizabeth had given him specific instructions, when Leicester arrived in the Netherlands, he was received as a second Charles V and treated as though he would have "absolute power and authority" (R.C. Strong and J.A. van Dorsten, Leicester's Triumph [Oxford: 1964], p. 53). On 25 January 1586, upon the urging of the Estates General, Leicester accepted the title of Governor General. Elizabeth was furious with Leicester's acceptance of the post. She sent a privy councilor, Sir Thomas Heneage, with a letter of royal protest to be publicly read in the earl's presence and ordering him to resign the post. Although both Leicester and the Estates General tried to argue against it, in October 1586, the earl gave in.

Leicester, contrary to the queen's express orders, began to engage the Spanish directly. After some initial success, he soon became embroiled in quarrels with the other commanders, an inability to keep his soldiers supplied, and the loss of key positions. Leicester's execution of Baron Hemart, the governor of Grave, in punishment for the loss of that city to the Spanish, viewing the revolt in terms of his enthusiastic pro-Protestant leanings, and assuming a more authoritarian method of governance, disenchanted the Dutch nobility with him. Due to these problems, in December 1586, Leicester returned to England. While there, the Catholic officers he had placed in command of Deventer and Zutphen went over to the Spanish. Both Leicester's Dutch friends and English critics pressed him to return to the Netherlands. Shortly after his arrival in June 1587, however, the English-held town of Sluys fell to the Spanish, in part because Leicester was unable to exert his authority over the Dutch allies in relieving the town. Soon after, Elizabeth entered into peace negotiations with the Spanish commander in the Netherlands, the Duke of Parma. By December 1587, Leicester asked to be recalled and surrendered his post, a defeated and financially ruined man.

The reading of the mint signature on this coin is problematic, as the final letter is not clearly engraved. While it may have the appearance of an R, the only possibility for that letter to be correct would be if the reverse legend would read ALFPO:LD O NOR, so that the mint is Norwich. However, no moneyer by this name operated at Norwich under Cnut. The alternative would be the reading above, with the C engraved in a linear form, resulting in the mint being Oxford, where a moneyer by this name is known for all of Cnut's coin types struck there.

From the Collection of an Underwriter. Ex R.P. Mack Collection (Part I, Glendining, 18 November 1975), lot 198 (his ticket included), who purchased it from Spink, 21 July 1959; reportedly ex Duke of Argyll Collection.

The consignor purchased this coin from Spink in February 2008. On the ticket from Spink, the Duke of Argyll collection is cited, but this pedigree does not appear in the Mack sylloge, nor on Mack's collection ticket. Nonetheless, the coin may be from Argyll, as that collection was purchased by Spink in 1949, from whom Mack bought this coin in 1959. Interestingly, the Mack sylloge cites "bt. Spink 1957," but this is apparently erroneous, as Mack's own ticket cites the date of purchase as "21/7/59." Thus, the Argyll pedigree also may have been erroneously left out of the sylloge.

2404. ANGLO-SAXON, Kings of All England. Edward the Confessor. 1042-1066. AR Penny (20mm, 1.37 g, 12h). Pointed Helmet type (BMC vii, Hild. F). Theodford (Thetford) mint; Godleof, moneyer. Mack Collection, 1218 (his ticket included, not in Glendining sales), who purchased it from Spink, 16 October 1961; reportedly ex Duke of Argyll Collection.

As with the previous lot, the Duke of Argyll pedigree has been added to this coin in a recent Spink sale. As Spink purchased the Argyll collection in 1949, it is possible that they have records verifying this.

2405. ANGLO-SAXON, Kings of All England. Edward the Confessor. 1042-1066. AR Penny (19mm, 1.23 g, 12h). Sovereign/Martlets type (BMC ix; Hild. H). Theodford (Thetford) mint; Thorfrithr, moneyer. From the Andrew Wayne Collection. Ex Dix, Noonan, Webb 86 (16 June 2010), lot 929 (back cover coin). Found near Salisbury, Wiltshire, May 2010.

Patrick of Salisbury (circa 1122-1168), the 1st Earl of Salisbury, was an Anglo-Norman nobleman and the uncle of Sir William Marshal, 1st Earl of Pembroke, the “greatest knight that ever lived.” Born to Walter of Salisbury and Sibilla de Chaworth, Patrick was constable of Salisbury. While Patrick initially supported King Stephen in The Anarchy (1135-1153), he transferred his allegiance from King Stephen to the Empress Matilda when his sister, Sybilla, married John FitzGilbert in 1141. John was the former Marshal to Henry I and a recent supporter of Matilda. Through this astute political move, Patrick was made an earl and gained the friendship of his new brother-in-law. John went so far as to send his younger son William to stay with Patrick, and it was during this time that William began to learn the qualities of knighthood that made him a legend. Patrick was killed at Poitiers in 1168, during an ambush by the forces of Guy of Lusignan.

Although most of the distinguishing characteristics are off the flan, the tuft of hair on the portrait relegates this issue to no earlier than Class C1. As the moneyer Martin is unattested on later issues, it is likely that this is the correct class.

Struck 1248-1250. HE^NR^IC^VS R^EX • III, crowned facing head, with beard of strokes / HIC OLE OH L VHD, voided long cross, with pellet at center and three pellets in angles. Colchester (1969) 829i (same dies); cf. North 986; cf. SCBC 1362. VF, toned, some porosity. Very rare type with beard of strokes rather than pellets. ($200)

From the Marshall Faintich Collection (purchased from A. Murfet, 28 February 2001).

Although the Colchester hoard was discovered in 1969, and reported on in BNJ 1972, the beard of strokes was not recognized even as late as Wren's 1993 book on the long cross coinage, nor North's 1994 edition of his book on hammered coinage. In the hoard the type is found only on Class Ib coins from Canterbury (27 examples) and Classes Ia, Ib, and IIIa from London (10 examples). This variety is extremely rare in the marketplace, especially as most of the pieces in Colchester went to the BM (12 of the Canterbury total and 9 of London). At the same time, other museums also acquired coins from the hoard (cf. Colchester (1969) p. 68), so it is likely that the remaining 16 pieces from Colchester are also unavailable. Interestingly, the obverse die used for this coin was also used by the moneyer Henri (cf. Colchester Hoard 691).

2504. PLANTAGENET. Henry III. 1216-1272. AR Penny (17mm, 1.41 g, 2h). Long cross type, class IVa. London mint; David, moneyer. Apparently unique. ($200)

From the Marshall Faintich Collection (purchased from Andy Singer, 17 March 2001). Ex Spink Numismatic Circular CIX.1 (February 2001), no. HS0192. Lot includes an old Seaby ticket in the hand of P.F. Purvey (cf. Eaglen pl. 33, D22C-2), and a ticket from a collector who purchased the coin from Seaby on 20 January 1958.

This penny has elements of a variety of class 3 subgroups. The crown has the pearl ornaments of classes 3a and 3b, while the drapery at the neck is typical of class 3c. The North sylloge (SCBI 39) has a coin with these elements (no. 80), but it does not have the feature found on the reverse of this coin: pellet-barred Ns, which are only known on classes 3e-3g. At the same time, the portrait here, with its short and broad features, is unusual for all these classes. The most plausible scenario is that this is a mule, struck from an early class 3 obverse paired with a late class 3 reverse.

The Ian Gordon Collection of Coins of Charles I and the Civil War

Ian Gordon is the president of the Longwave Group, an investment advisory company that provides strategic advice to institutional and retail clients based on Ian's Longwave Principle, which he developed from the Kondratiev wave economic cycle.

Ian was born in India during the Second World War. His father was the commanding officer of an Indian Army infantry battalion and his mother was the daughter of a Brigadier in the Royal Artillery. After the War the family returned to the United Kingdom. Ian's interest in history, and particularly military history, was thus fostered from a very early age. In 1961 Ian followed in his father and two older brothers' footsteps and entered the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst. At Sandhurst one of the compulsory academic subjects was the study of military history. Incorporated within that curriculum was a study of the English Civil War. Ian continued to study this period in British history and from that study was inspired to build a coin collection based on this very interesting numismatic period. The resulting collection, more than 12 years in the making, is evidenced in this sale.

The collection is arranged herein by mint (organized as in SCBC), then date, and finally denomination. It commences with an impressive run of the various denominations struck at the Tower mint during the reign of Charles I (1625-49) both prior to and after the outbreak of the Civil War in 1642. Charles's Scottish coinage is also represented, as are some of the emergency issues struck during the Great Rebellion in Ireland. Among the many coins in the collection from the Royalist mints of the Civil War, the magnificent Triple Unite struck in Oxford in 1644 (Lot 2588), which has a pedigree reaching back to the celebrated Rashleigh sale in 1909, is of particular note. A desirable group of siege issues includes a very rare Carlisle Shilling of 1645 (Lot 2611), and two Pontefract Shillings struck in the name of Charles II after the execution of Charles I (Lots 2619 and 2620). The collection culminates with coins of the Commonwealth (1649-60) including those in the name of the Lord Protector, Oliver Cromwell.

Although it appears as an amorphous blob, Schneider lists the initial mark on the reverse of coin 116 as a cross cavalry (which is clearly on the coin's obverse). A comparison with the present coin, though, reveals that the reverses of both coins were struck from the same reverse die. Thus, the initial mark on the reverse of Schneider 116 must be a lis, but perhaps a bungled attempt had been made to change the die over to the new mark

From the Ian Gordon Collection (acquired in Toronto, 1994).

From its establishment in November 1640 until its formal dissolution in 1660, the Long Parliament was the catalyst for the English Civil War and its subsequent events. Initially called by Charles I to handle the royal financial crisis caused by the Bishops' Wars (1639-1640), which had bankrupted the king, the new Parliament became the platform for those unhappy with the intrigues surrounding the prevention of the appointment of Sir Henry Vane the Elder (1589-1655) as Secretary of State. Influenced by John Pym (1584-1643), who became the leader of the opposition to the king, Parliament proceeded to enact legislation, including the Dissolution Act, designed to prevent Charles from acting with absolute authority any longer. It also oversaw the execution of two of the king's advisers, Thomas Wentworth, Earl of Stafford, and Archbishop William Laud. In December 1641, Parliament presented Charles with a list of grievances of the king's "misdeeds". Known as the Grand Remonstrance, it proposed a Parliamentary solution (including pro-Puritan church reform and Parliamentary influence in the appointment of royal ministers). Ignoring this, Charles then moved to arrest the members of Parliament he believed to be encouraging the kingdom to turn against him. In early January 1642, the king entered the House of Commons to arrest John Pym, John Hampden, Denzil Holles, Sir Arthur Haselrig and William Strode (along with Viscount Mandeville) on a charge of treason. When Charles was unable to locate them there, he abandoned London for Oxford, where, along with those royalist members of Parliament who followed the king there, the Oxford Parliament was formed. London, with its government and especially its mint, remained under the control of Parliament.

Siege Issues – Carlisle

Due to its location along the Scottish-English border, the city of Carlisle became a strategic location and was periodically besieged. During the English Civil War Carlisle was besieged twice. The first siege took place in 1644, when Scottish Presbyterians, or the Covenanters, attempted to take the city from the Royalists and their commander, James Graham, 1st Marquess of Montrose. Being unsuccessful in this attempt, they tried again the following year. This time, the Covenanters were led by Alexander Leslie, 1st Earl of Leven. A man of great military experience because of his service in both the Dutch and Swedish armies, Leslie successfully led the siege early in 1645. The garrison and the townspeople were put on short allowance by the end of February, but although they suffered almost unexampled distresses, they held out until all hopes of relief had vanished after the Battle of Naseby in mid-June, though they did not surrender until two weeks later.

Siege Issues – Newark

In addition to defeating Royalist forces in the field during the English Civil War Period (1642-1651), Parliamentarian commanders also at several points during this same period besieged those strategically important and heavily fortified Royalist centers. Among these centers, the most important was the city of Newark-on-Trent (commonly shortened to Newark). Located between the rivers Trent and Devon, and at the intersection of the Great North Road and the ancient Fosse Way, the city was a mainstay of the Royalist cause. Because of this, it was the subject of three attacks. The first attempt occurred in February 1643 when Major-General Thomas Ballard, at the head of 6,000 Parliamentarians, tried to take the town, but, realizing his force was insufficient for success, withdrew after a battle of only one day. Following this event, the city repaired its existing castle and medieval walls, and a new circuit of earthwork banks and ditches was constructed. Combined with the natural barrier offered by the River Trent, Newark became an impregnable fortress.

In early March 1644, a force of Parliamentary troops, this time under the command of Francis, Lord Willoughby of Parham and Sir John Meldrum, laid siege to Newark. Seizing control of the level area to the northwest of the city – an area known as “the Island” – the Parliamentarians attempted on 8 March to break through, but were repulsed by the city defenders; at the same time, a Royalist force, sent from nearby Belvoir Castle to relieve the city, was beaten back. Under the direct order of King Charles I, Prince Rupert on 12 March, hurried toward the city. Along the way, he acquired what Royalist forces he could. Rather than simply relieving the siege of Newark and allowing the Parliamentarians the opportunity to withdraw and return at a later time, Rupert’s plan was to destroy the besieging army. Beginning in the early hours of 21 March, Rupert’s forces advanced upon the Parliamentarians and forced them to become hemmed in on “the Island”. Now, surrounded by the Royalists and with no recourse for either maneuver or withdrawal, the besieging Parliamentarians began to mutiny. Calling for a parley, the Parliamentarians were allowed to march away, but without their artillery, firearms, and ammunition. Upon Rupert’s departure, the surrendered ordinance was incorporated into the city’s defenses, while the Parliamentarian command center during the siege was demolished and in its place was constructed a massive defensive earthwork.

The relief of Newark in March 1644 allowed the city to become a staging area for Royalist raids throughout the Midlands for the rest of that year. The events of 1645, however, were to contribute to this vital stronghold’s undoing. In May 1645, Sir Richard Willys, an ally of Prince Rupert, was appointed new governor of Newark. In mid-June, however, the main Royalist force under Charles I was soundly defeated at Naseby by the Parliamentarian New Model Army of Oliver Cromwell and Lord Thomas Fairfax. Following a second Royalist defeat at Rowton Heath in late September and his subsequent withdrawal from Chester, Charles withdrew to Newark in October 1645. Now, with his command structure beginning to disintegrate because of a conflict with Prince Rupert and the removal of Sir Richard Willys as governor of Newark, and the Parliamentarian forces hot on the king’s heels from Chester, Charles, in early November, withdrew to Oxford. In place of Willys, Charles appointed Lord Belasyse as governor of Newark. Anticipating an imminent attack, Belasyse ordered the city to be resupplied, as well as the construction of additional earthwork defenses – including a ditch around the entire town and the destruction of all buildings outside the perimeter. Beginning at about the same time Charles was departing, the Parliamentarian forces under the command of Sydenham Poyntz moved up from the south, massacring and plundering their way toward Newark. The siege of the city itself began in earnest on 26 November 1645 with the arrival of the main body, consisting of Parliamentarians and Scottish Covenanters, under the command of Alexander Leslie, the Earl of Leven. Over the next five months and with a defensive force of less than 2,000 men, Belasyse conducted a vigorous defense. At times, the defenders even conducted raids against the besiegers; in one raid, Sydenham Poyntz himself was almost captured. By the spring of 1646, however, the tide had begun to turn against the defenders. The Parliamentarian besiegers began contracting their siege lines while the Scottish Covenanters established a fortress – Fort Edinburgh – on “the Island”. By mid-March, Newark was entirely surrounded and cut-off from access to the outside. In April, the Scots captured a Royalist work called Sandhills Sconce, which they converted into a battery from which they could bombard the town. Through all of this, however, Belasyse refused to surrender.

While Newark was close to being stormed, diplomatic negotiations, led by the French, had been ongoing to secure an end to the war and the surrender of the king to the Scots, rather than Parliament. In early May 1646, with the New Model Army closing in on Oxford, Charles fled to the Scottish camp outside of Newark, where he surrendered himself to Lieutenant-General David Leslie, acting commander of the Covenanter army. Eager to transport the king to Newcastle-on-Tyne, a place which was more secure and closer to the Scottish border, but unwilling to appear as if he had abandoned his Parliamentarian allies, Leslie urged the king to order the immediate surrender of Newark on reasonable terms. Although Lord Belasyse is said to have wept when he received the order, he had no choice but to obey. Newark surrendered on 6 May 1646 and Belasyse marched out with his much-reduced garrison. On 8 May, the Scots broke camp and marched north, taking Charles I with them in semi-captivity.

Siege Issues – Pontefract

Like Newcastle-on-Trent, Pontefract, located in West Yorkshire, was also a strategic Royalist site. Centered around Pontefract Castle, a Norman Conquest-era structure with a significant medieval and early modern history – it was supposedly the site where Richard II had been put to death in 1400, it was surrendered in 1536 to the leaders of the Catholic rebellion in the North known as the “Pilgrimage of Grace” and it was the place where, in 1541, Katherine Howard, the fifth wife of Henry VIII, was supposed to have committed adultery with Sir Thomas Culpepper. Although the castle itself was in a dilapidated state by 1644, Pontefract’s position in the highly contested district of West Yorkshire was such that Oliver Cromwell called it “one of the strongest inland garrisons in the kingdom”.

On 19 December 1644, the Parliamentarians and Scottish Covenanters began the first siege of Pontefract. Lord Thomas Fairfax arrived shortly thereafter to command the siege, since the taking of Pontefract would be a significant blow to the Royalist cause in Yorkshire. By mid-January 1644/5, bombardment of the city ensued, a final step that would soften up Pontefract’s defenses in preparation for taking the city and a sign that Pontefract’s fall was soon to occur. To relieve the city and secure Yorkshire for the Royalists, Sir Marmaduke Langdale and the Northern Horse moved out of their quarters in Salisbury and Wiltshire in late-February, moving north. Langdale’s defeat of Colonel John Lambert at Wentbridge brought relief to Pontefract as the besiegers withdrew temporarily. By the end of March, however, the besiegers returned and, over the next several months, Pontefract was again besieged, surrendering in late July 1645.

It was during the Second English Civil War (1648-1649), when Pontefract was again besieged, that coins were issued for it. Under Parliamentarian control since its surrender, Pontefract was seized in early June 1648 by Colonel John Morrice, who declared it for Charles I. Over that early summer, the city became the base for a number of Royalist raids in the surrounding countryside. In retaliation, Parliamentarian forces were brought to bear to take Pontefract, and by August, with Oliver Cromwell himself in command, heavy artillery was brought up to reduce its defenses. The long siege continued and, by October, Pontefract remained one of the only two castles (the other being Scarborough) that still held out for the king.

Even after the execution of Charles I on 30 January 1648/9, Pontefract still would not surrender. Now, Colonel Morrice declared for Charles II and the city’s motto – Post mortem patris pro filio – a motto which also appears on this siege issue, refers to that support. On 24 March 1649, almost two months after Charles was beheaded and after a siege of almost nine months, Colonel Morrice and his garrison finally capitulated. To ensure that the castle would not serve as a base for any future rebellion and, on the pleadings of the local populace weary of war, Parliament had the remains of the castle demolished later that same year.

An Exceptional Offering of Hiberno-Norse Coinage

The minting of coinage in Ireland began shortly before 1000 when the Hiberno-Norse king of Dublin, Sihtric III Olafsson, authorized the striking of silver coins to pay for the town's defenses. Copying directly from contemporary Anglo-Saxon issues of Æthelred II (979-1016) and Cnut (1016-1035), these pennies bear the name Sihtric or Æthelred on the obverse, and the moneyer and mint name of Dublin on the reverse. In addition to these coins, a series of derivative types, based on Æthelred's Long Cross coinage type, became so popular that they continued to be struck until at least 1150. The designs of these later issues grew increasingly more schematized and the legends unintelligible. Numismatists call this coinage Hiberno-Norse (or, sometimes, Hiberno-Danish), since it was struck for those of combined Norse-Gaelic background who settled in the area of the Irish Sea. The coinage is traditionally divided into seven distinct phases. Phase I (Circa 995/7-1020) and Phase II (circa 1018-1035) are issues roughly contemporary with the reign of Sihtric Anlafsson. Phase I coins are heavier than those of Phase II and attempt to accurately copy their English prototypes, sometimes even including obverse legend with the name of the English king rather than the name of Sihtric. Phase I mules abound, combining a Sihtric obverse with an English reverse, and vice versa. During Phase II, the coins, in addition to becoming lighter, begin to imitate the earlier imitations, with the name of Sihtric passing from NIHTRIC to NHTRC and INTRE. The majority of Phase II issues have the reverse legend FÆREMIN M' O DYFLIN, indicating that the direct copying of English prototypes was no longer necessary in coin production. Coinage of Phase III (circa 1035-1055/60) is of a consistent, albeit reduced, weight. The majority of extant examples of this Phase came from four distinct hoards, three of which were deposited in southern Leinster County, Ireland, and one on the Isle of Man. Dublin remained the Hiberno-Norse mint to the inexplicable exclusion of a flourishing Hiberno-Norse community at Waterford. Phase IV (circa 1055/60-1065) is the most numismatically intriguing. This phase continues the types of the earlier phases, though with more crudely-designed "scratched" dies, and occur in two varieties that are distinguished by a left or right facing bust. In addition, a new, short-lived, and quite rare, facing bust type was introduced. In appearance, this obverse type was unlike anything to this point in the Hiberno-Norse series, and led to the suggestion that it was an early Anglo-Norman issue of local produce, namely Limerick (SCBI 8, p. 132 and note 4). The epigraphy of the obverse is similar to other Hiberno-Norse issues, and the close resemblance of some reverse dies between this type and other Phase IV issues, almost certainly makes this type part of that phase (cf. SCBI 8 145 and 155). Phase V (circa 1065-1085/95) is perhaps the most complicated phase. In addition to returning to the traditional Hiberno-Norse types of prior phases, new types are introduced. The prototypes for these new coins are mostly near-contemporary English coins, but it is highly probable that contemporary Danish coins were also used (SCBI 8, p. 137). Like the previous phases, the coins of Phase VI (circa 1095/1100-1150) are also uniform in their design and further-reduced weight. One significant feature of this phase is the common inclusion of a crook to the left of the portrait, a feature which appeared only occasionally in Phase V. While the symbol has been argued to represent an ecclesiastical event (and, hence described in some catalogs as a crozier), the evidence is insufficient. The average weight of coins of this phase is 0.52g. The final phase, Phase VII (circa 1150), is represented by two major hoards, Scrabo and Castleyons, both locations far-removed from Dublin, as well as two coin types. The first type, found in the Scrabo hoard, is familiar in design, although much rougher and of a very thin fabric, and is referred to as a semi-bracteate, because, due to the thinness of the metal, the design of either the obverse or reverse assumes some concavity. The second type, found exclusively in the Castleyons hoard, is a true bracteate. The style and fabric of this latter type suggests a mint authority different from that of the previous Hiberno-Norse phases. One possible source, suggested by Dolley (SCBI 8, p. 142-144), for these coins is Toirrdhealbhach Ó Conchubhair, the twelfth-century king of Connacht (Connaught). According to the 1662 Cambrensis Eversus of John Lynch (SCBI 8 op. cit.), Toirrdhealbhach, who aspired to the High Kingship and was deeply religious, ordered silver coinage to be struck at the important Connacht monastic center of Cluain Mhic Nóis (Clonmacnoise). While compelling, the evidence for such an attribution is largely circumstantial. If these bracteates were struck on behalf of Toirrdhealbhach Ó Conchubhair, they would be the only coins to date of one of the High Kings of Ireland prior to the Norman incursion on the island.
